- Exodus 20:1-17

The formation of a good and right conscience is a fundamental element of Christian moral teaching. Since we have the obligation to obey our conscience, we also have the great responsibility to see that it is formed in a way that reflects the true moral good.

Assertiveness in expressing their right to bodily integrity and personal boundaries, including respectful language should be apparent.

The demonstration of behaviors and attitudes that foster sensitivity, appreciation and respect for all people should also be apparent.

Children must have a sense of personal and social responsibility and be aware that there are consequences to their choices and actions because of the sacredness of life, the equality of all peoples, races, and ethnic groups and Jesus' love and mercy towards the poor.

The Bible is a collection of many books. The writers of the Bible were inspired by God and wrote in a way that the people of their time would understand.

Law – the first five books of the Bible called the Pentateuch, which means “five scrolls”. These books are also called the Torah. They tell the story of the creation, covenant and how God cared for his people on their journey to the promised land.

Historical Books – These books show that God cared for his People during their history. They are not always complete or scientifically or historically accurate. Their purpose is to remind the Hebrew people that God was with them during all of the events of their lives.

Wisdom Books – tell people how to live wisely. They show the Israelite people how to act and pray. They contain psalms, poems, prayers, sermons, proverbs and parables.

Prophetic Books – tell about the prophets and their messages. When the people had turned away from God, the prophets brought their thoughts back to God and reminded them of His love for them. The prophets also told the people to be just to one another.

Help your child to use the psalms and other scriptural passages in prayer.

You might begin with “The Canticle of Zechariah” in Luke 1:15-25, 57-80 or maybe Psalm 51:3-4, 12, 14, 19.
